Fostering the Future Leaders of Our Industry

In today's competitive jobs market, it is often difficult for young undergraduates to find ways to differentiate themselves from their peers when competing for the few coveted graduate employment positions. At The SILC Group, we believe in helping young graduates stand out from the crowd through our internship program. Now in its fourth year, we are proud to continue to provide one bright young undergraduate each year with the opportunity to work in our business and get hands on experience in learning to apply the theoretical knowledge they have learnt at university to the real world.

In this edition of SILC Insights, our 2017 intern Jared Chuah shares his story on the time he spent as an intern with The SILC Group. Also in this edition, The SILC Group's Managing Director, Koby Jones speaks to RMIT University's undergraduates about working in the Financial Services industry.

My Days at The SILC Group

Whilst completing his final year of a Bachelor of Commerce degree at Melbourne University, Jared Chuah also worked part time as an intern at The SILC Group. During his internship, Jared was given the opportunity to work across our various business units and attend a number of industry networking functions.
